Kopi Luwak

___18___ In the early 18th century the Dutch established the cash-crop coffee plantations in their colony in the Dutch East Indies islands of Java and Sumatra, including Arabica coffee introduced from Yemen. During the era of Cultuurstelsel(1830–70), the Dutch prohibited the native farmers and plantation workers from picking coffee fruits for their own use. Still, the native farmers wanted to have a taste of the famed coffee beverage. ___19___ The natives collected these luwaks' coffee seed droppings, then cleaned, roasted and ground them to make their own coffee beverage ___20___. The fame of aromatic civet coffee spread from locals to Dutch plantation owners and soon became their favourite,.

___21___. Kopi luwak is a name for any beans collected from the excrement of civets, hence the taste may vary with the type and origin of beans ingested, processing subsequent to collection, roasting, ageing and brewing. The ability of the civet to select its berries, and other aspects of the civet's diet and health (e.g. stress levels) may also influence the processing and hence taste.

In the coffee industry, kopi luwak is widely regarded as a gimmick or novelty item. The Specialty Coffee Association of America (SCAA) states ___22___. A coffee professional cited in the SCAA article was able to compare the same beans with and without the kopi luwak process using a rigorous coffee cupping evaluation. He concluded: "it was apparent that Luwak coffee sold for the story, not superior quality. ___23___. It would appear that the Luwak processing diminishes good acidity and flavor and adds smoothness to the body, which is what many people seem to note as a positive to the coffee."

Some critics claim more generally that kopi luwak is simply bad coffee, ___24___. Massimo Marcone, who performed extensive chemical tests on the beans, was unable to conclude if anything about their properties made them superior for purposes of making coffee. ___25___. While the cuppers were able to distinguish the kopi luwak as distinct from the other samples, they had nothing remarkable to appraise about it other than it was less acidic and had less body, tasting "thin". Marcone remarked "It's not that people are after that distinct flavor. ___26___".

- A Few objective assessments of taste are available
- B He employed several professional coffee tasters (called "cuppers") in a blind taste test
- C purchased for novelty rather than taste
- D that there is a general consensus within the industry that it just tastes bad
- E The origin of kopi luwak is closely connected to the history of coffee production in Indonesia.

- F Soon, the natives learned that certain species of musang or luwak (Asian Palm Civet) consumed the coffee fruits, yet they left the coffee seeds undigested in their droppings
- G They are after the rarity of the coffee
- H Using the SCAA cupping scale, the Luwak scored two points below the lowest of the other three coffees
- I yet because of its rarity and unusual process, the civet coffee was expensive even during the colonial era
- J and they were invariably very wild in Africa
- K Little did they know about the consensus referring to their ancestors
- L The Dutch have learnt a lot about raising civets
